1. Name the two proposed options.

Answer: a reading corner and a garden

2. State which option you prefer.

Look for:

- States a clear preference; either option is acceptable.

One possible response: I prefer a garden.

3. Give two reasons connected to your preferred option.

Look for:

- Reasons relate to the chosen option.

One possible response: It allows plant observations and gives us a responsibility to share.

4. Name one possible difficulty with your choice.

Look for:

- Acknowledges a relevant limitation.

One possible response: The garden needs regular watering.

5. Write a conclusion that follows your reasons.

Look for:

- Connects the ending to the opinion and reasons.

One possible response: For these reasons, I would choose the garden and share watering duties.

6. Revise: My option is good because it is good.

Look for:

- Replaces circular support with a concrete reason.

One possible response: The garden is useful because we can observe plants growing.

Open responses use criteria and an illustrative response. Other well-supported responses can be acceptable.
