Fictional accounts of a market move

Invented practice data or scenario; not a report of a real study.

Background: A fictional town moved its market from a narrow street to an open square. No real historical document is quoted.

Account A, vendor: The square gives carts room, but I pay more to transport goods. I have sold there for one week.

Account B, nearby resident: The old street is quieter now. I no longer see the morning market from my window. I have not visited the new site.

1. Which author sells goods at the new site?

2. Compare one benefit and one concern in A.

3. What limits B's knowledge of the new site?

4. What other evidence would help evaluate the move?
