1. Suggest a schedule responding to both groups.

Look for:

- Makes the arrangement clear.
- Considers both uses.

One possible response: Set one quiet hour and other times for games.

2. What should the group check after trying the schedule?

Look for:

- Suggests relevant feedback rather than assuming success.

One possible response: Whether people can use it fairly and whether the timing works.

Open responses use criteria and an illustrative response. Other well-supported responses can be acceptable.
