1. What shared, limited conclusion do the notes support?

Look for:

- Combines both notes without asserting universal causation.

One possible response: Planning may help some students organize, with differing experiences.

2. Write a defensible thesis based on the two notes.

Look for:

- Matches the evidence boundaries.

One possible response: These notes suggest potential organizational benefits, but do not establish long-term academic gains.

Open responses use criteria and an illustrative response. Other well-supported responses can be acceptable.
